

TRIBUTE TO MS. BARBARA BROWN'S EFFORTS FOR PROSTATE CANCER AWARENESS

HON. CHARLES W. STENHOLM

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 23, 1999

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Barbara Brown of Coleman, Texas who is crusading for increased awareness of prostate cancer in honor of her late father, Carl Houston Hale, of West Memphis, Arkansas, who lost his life to this cancer on December 12, 1997. Known as a silent killer, prostate cancer will affect over 175,000 men in the United States this year. Today alone, approximately 100 men will die from this disease, and in one year over 37,000 will be lost as well. Excluding skin cancer, cancer of the prostate is the most common malignancy and the second leading cause of death among men in the United States. The risk of prostate cancer increases with age; more than 80% of all prostate tumors are diagnosed in men over age 65. And while 1 in 5 men will develop prostate cancer in their lifetime, we still know far too little about the cause and behavior of this silent killer. Clearly, it is a national problem that has a severe impact on our nation.

In her younger years, Barbara sang in gospel groups, and dreamed of recording her own album. Through the grief of her father she wrote two songs, "Resting In the Arms of the Lord" and "Wind That Blows From Heaven," in an effort to cope with the overwhelming emotion of losing her father. These two songs eventually led to the recording of her first album in March 1998, entitled "Resting In the Arms of the Lord." With this Barbara achieved a life-long aspiration amidst unfortunate circumstances, and she is committed to donating a part of her tapes' proceeds to the American Cancer Society. As each tape is sold, a part of her father's life and his memory touches the lives of so many others, all while working towards the ultimate goal of a cure.

Additionally Barbara has devoted her life to bringing more awareness to this disease by urging men to seek regular check-ups and treatment if necessary. At Barbara's urging, the Coleman County Commissioners Court passed a proclamation declaring September 21st through September 27th as Prostate Cancer Awareness Week and advocating all to be aware of prostate cancer. With this proclamation, countless lives could be saved. Barbara also has plans to continue to promote awareness of this disease in the community of Coleman as well as surrounding areas by hosting various on-going promotional events raising money for the American Cancer Society.

I close by using Barbara's words which I believe have distinguished her as a heroic woman: "Out of our pain comes some of our greatest accomplishments. As I continue to educate men on this disease, hopefully it will prevent another person from having to face this needless pain. I have a responsibility to do this: in honor of my father's memory."

I ask that all of my colleagues join me in honoring Barbara for her efforts, and I encourage all Americans to take that crucial step of participating in important health screenings and visiting your doctor regarding health concerns. Early detection is critical for survival.

IN CELEBRATION OF LORRIE NELSON'S DEDICATION TO EDUCATION

HON. ELTON GALLEGLY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 23, 1999

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to celebrate the energy and dedication that Lorraine "Lorrie" Nelson, a fifth-grade teacher in my district, brings to her classroom and her profession. The Poinsettia Elementary School educator was honored this week as Ventura County's Teacher of the Year.

Mrs. Nelson was raised to be a teacher, although she didn't realize it until she was engrossed in law school. Her parents encouraged the young Lorrie and her brother to engage in family discussions, to ask questions and expect answers. She learned to listen from her parents' example. Now, after some 10 years of encouraging other young minds to learn, Mrs. Nelson couldn't see herself doing anything else.

Children in the Ventura Unified School District who have experienced her lesson plans calls her "funny" and even "crazy." But it's fun with a purpose. Mrs. Nelson encourages her students to set high standards and helps them achieve them. She believes teachers should be skillful in the topics they teach our children, a subject I have strongly supported legislatively for several years.

To achieve her goal, Mrs. Nelson directed the Ventura Unified Writing Project from 1993 to 1997. The Writing Project is a mentoring program for teachers who write extensively, demonstrate instructional techniques and examine research in the teaching of writing.

This past summer, Mrs. Nelson taught a two-week course titled "Integrating Standards with Inspirational Teaching." She has been a presenter for the South Coast Writing Project Summer Institutes for the Ventura Unified School District and Santa Barbara School Districts, in such topics as Writing Workshop, Writing Response and Reading Comprehension. In the fall, she will work the Shoah Foundation to develop a curriculum for oral histories of Holocaust survivors.

She is, of course, a published writer.

But her real accomplishments are in inspiring her students. One way she has done that is by pairing her students with some influential adults—their parents—in a writing program suitably titled "Family of Writers."

Not surprisingly, Mrs. Nelson has garnered numerous honors, starting with her first year of teaching, when she was recognized as the Ventura Unified School District Sallie Mae First Year Teacher of the Year.

Mr. Speaker, Ventura County has rightly honored Mrs. Nelson as the model other educators should strive to be. She holds her students accountable in a fun, productive learning environment. She holds herself and her peers accountable by stressing the skills teachers need to be effective educators.

Next month, Mrs. Nelson will compete for California Teacher of the Year. Win or lose, education will always be victorious in her classroom.

Mrs. Speaker, I'd like to close with Mrs. Nelson's own thoughts, her closing words in her Professional Biography. After hearing these words, I know my colleagues will join me in congratulating her for her award and thank her for dedicating herself to our children.

"Even though students leave my classroom with beautifully bound poetry anthologies, framed self-portraits, and cherished pet beetles, my greatest contribution as a teacher is invisible. Students leave with an understanding that their opinions are important. They know that life is a process of learning, questioning and revising. They become life-long learners."

We couldn't ask for anything more.

HONORING THE 45TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIG BROTHERS BIG SISTERS OF GREATER LANSING

HON. DEBBIE STABENOW

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 23, 1999

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. Speaker, the Big Brother Big Sisters of Greater Lansing program celebrates 45 years of bringing together young people at risk with older people willing to serve as a role model and mentor.

Before terms like "quality time," "mentoring," or "at risk youth" were buzz words in our society, Big Brothers and Big Sisters has been helping to give young people something we all need—a friend.

Perhaps more than any other program this century, the Big Brothers Big Sisters program offers an inspiring example of what can happen when an adult is willing to be a friend to a young person in need of a positive influence. Like similar programs throughout the country, the Big Brothers Big Sisters Program of Greater Lansing has been a smashing success.

I would like to thank the Big Brothers Big Sisters of Greater Lansing and everyone who has made the commitment to serve as a big brother or big sister for a child. Thousands of children have found the friend, the confident, the role model they never had in their big brothers and big sisters. I send my sincere thanks to the Big Brothers Big Sisters of Greater Lansing for taking the time to care and make the Lansing community a better place for all children.

TANNER PRAISES CAREER OF P-I PUBLISHER, BILL WILLIAMS

HON. JOHN S. TANNER

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 23, 1999

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, Bill Williams understands what community journalism is all about: ensuring an informed citizenry.

And he practiced that kind of community journalism in the pages of the Paris Post-Intelligencer every day.

Now at 65, he has decided to retire as publisher of the Paris Post-Intelligencer on August 20, 1999. He had been the paper's publisher since 1978, when he took his father's place at the paper's helm.

Bill took seriously the responsibility that comes with a free press, and you knew it immediately when you read his editorial page.

Whether it involved the Land Between the Lakes, the Tennessee Valley Authority, State government, or even national issues, Bill Williams stood up for his community and he wasn't afraid to take a controversial position when he believed it was the right thing to do. Indeed, in 12 of the past 21 years his editorials were recognized among the best in the state.

Bill's family has owned the Paris Post-Intelligencer since 1927, when his great grandfather, W. Percy Williams moved to Paris from Alabama and purchased the P-I.

Upon his retirement, Bill Williams said he "is very proud of the newspaper." It's safe to say that the citizens of Henry County and many beyond the county's borders are proud of Bill and his commitment to this community.

His son, Michael Williams, takes over as the fourth-generation publisher and will continue the tradition of community journalism that has made the P-I an award winning newspaper.

An article published in the Paris Post-Intelligencer in Paris under the headline, "Publisher Bill Williams steps down; Has been with P-I most of adult life" as well as his last column are printed below in honor of Bill's service and commitment to his community.

PUBLISHER BILL WILLIAMS STEPS DOWN; HAS BEEN WITH P-I MOST OF ADULT LIFE

With the retirement today of Bill Williams and the promotion of Michael Williams, The Post-Intelligencer will have a fourth-generation Williams as editor and publisher.

Bill Williams has been with the paper most of his adult life and has been publisher since 1978. His son, Michael, 40, who has served as editor since 1992, will add the duties and title of publisher.

Bill Williams, who turns 65 today, became editor and publisher at the retirement of his father, Bryant. Bryant Williams in turn had taken over as publisher at the retirement in 1967 of his father, the late W. Percy Williams, who had come from Alabama to purchase The P-I in 1927.

Bill Williams said Thursday he "is very proud of the newspaper."

"I tired to see that it's been a good citizen of our community," he added.

He said that even though it's no fun dealing with an irate advertiser or a reader who thinks he's been wronged in the newspaper columns, he "never seriously considered doing anything else."

While attending Atkins-Porter and Grove High schools, Williams was a paper carrier. During his high school years, he also worked as a reporter after school, on Saturdays and during the summers.

After graduating third in his high school Class of 1952, Williams went on to graduate with honors as a journalism student at Murray State University. During his summers, Williams took a break from his college work to be a reporter for the P-I.

Throughout his college years, Williams was also a member of The College News staff. He was named the outstanding journalism student during his senior year.

After graduating from college, he was a reporter for the Memphis Press-Scimitar for a brief period, then for The Tullahoma News for three years before he returned to Paris in 1960 to become The P-I's news editor.

One of the things he said he enjoyed about his work was that at the end of each day, he was able to hold a paper in his hands and say, "Here's what we did today."

"It's also a joy to hear from people who used to work here and have gone on to do well in the newspaper business or elsewhere, and heard them speak fondly of their time at

The P-I," Williams said. "You feel like you had a small part to play in making someone's life a little more complete."

Williams also added he appreciated the contact he had with people both inside The P-I building and out, and that he enjoyed meeting people and being involved in various activities.

"Not every job offers that opportunity," Williams said.

The P-I has won awards and honors while under Williams' guidance. His editorials won state press awards in 12 of the past 21 years, including the best single editorial in 1998. That editorial lauded U.S. Rep. John Tanner, D-Tenn., for his controversial vote against a constitutional amendment to outlaw flag-burning.

A 125th anniversary edition of The P-I, published in 1991, won first prize in contests sponsored by the University of Tennessee and the TPA. Those judging the entrants declared it the best daily newspaper promotion in Tennessee during that year.

"This is an exceptional service not only for the reader but for the entire community, present and future," a contest judge from the Washington State Press Association commented about the anniversary promotion. "Many newspapers do something similar, but none with the depth and attention to detail so evident in your entire project."

Williams has served as president of the Tennessee Press Association and of the Tennessee Associated Press Managing Editors. He was a founding member of the board of directors of the Mid-America Press Institute.

In retirement, Williams said he plans to stay involved in civic activities, including the Optimist Club, where he's past-president; the Heritage Center, where he's past-executive director; and the Presbyterian Church, where he's an elder and Sunday school teacher.

He added he and his wife, Anne, also plan to do some traveling—"possibly snow birding to Florida or Texas in the winter."

They also have three daughters, Cindy Barnett and Joan Stevens, both of Henry County, and Julie Ray of Clarksville; and 11 grandchildren.

[From the Paris Post-Intelligencer, Aug. 20, 1999]

I'M NOT VERY RETIRING ABOUT THE ROLE OF THE NEWSPAPER
(By Bill Williams)

Upon retirement, a fellow gets asked the usual questions about the most memorable experiences or what it all has meant. I suppose a valedictory is called for.

I will not fib and say that every moment has been pure joy or that I can't understand why I get paid for doing something that is so much fun.

There have been times that publishing a newspaper was pure hell. It's no fun dealing with an irate advertiser. It's even worse to talk with someone who's been hurt because we made a mistake in print.

I can truthfully say, though, that I've never seriously considered any other line of work.

If there any regrets, they're that I didn't spend more time and energy preaching to our staff and to you, dear reader, that newspapering is a noble business.

When we think of the highest callings, what usually come to mind are the ministry, the healing arts, teaching and perhaps law and law enforcement. A lot of people put the press down near the bottom, somewhere close to congressmen.

Pardon my conceit, but I put the press up in that top batch. We are in effect in the public education business. People depend on us to know what's going on in the world so they can react—where to spend their money, whom to vote for, what to do this weekend.

The function is contained in the name of our newspaper. An intelligencer, as I understand it, was a town crier, one who spreads intelligence (in the information sense) among the public.

I've always thought that Mirror is a good name for a newspaper, too. I believe a newspaper's highest function is to reflect as perfectly as possible what the world looks like—both warts and dimples—so that the people will know what to do. It's the philosophy of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, which uses an image of a lighthouse and the slogan. "Give light and the people will find their own way."

It's a view that puts the public in an exalted position. Some think that people are basically stupid and can be led this way or that by anyone who is smart, glib and media savvy. I disagree; I think when people are fully informed, they usually make the right choice.

Others believe that the basic duty of a newspaper is to be the community leader, beating the drum for needed improvements and pushing people to do the right thing. That's a high purpose, all right, but I really believe that an even higher is the duty to tell just as fully as we can what's happening and to trust the people to come to the right conclusions.

Well, I didn't intend to preach so, but this is a bully pulpit.

Let me take this opportunity to thank you for allowing The P-I to be part of your life. I trust it will continue to be for many years to come.

LEWIS FLACKS OF THE U.S.
COPYRIGHT OFFICE

HON. HOWARD COBLE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 23, 1999

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, Lewis Flacks, who was employed nearly 25 years in the U.S. Copyright Office, died on July 23, 1999, in London. As Chairman of the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property, I have come to rely on the technical expertise on copyright matters that are available through the auspices of the Office. The men and women who work there provide a great and needed service to the Congress and the American public, and their contributions should be recognized with greater frequency. In this regard, while I was saddened to learn of Lewis' death, I am honored to have this opportunity to acknowledge his life and his work.

I wish to enter in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the following article regarding Lewis Flacks' accomplishments. It originally appeared in the August issue of Copyright Notices, the staff newsletter of the Copyright Office.

LEWIS FLACKS, AN APPRECIATION
(By Ruth Sievers)

Lewis Flacks, 55 whose career at the Copyright Office spanned over 20 years, died of cancer in London on July 23, 1999, where he had lived for the past 6 years since leaving his position as a policy planning advisor to the Register. He was the director of legal affairs for the International Federation of the Phonographic Industry (IFPI).
